HALIFAX HALL

BOUTIQUE HOTEL

THE HISTORY OF HALIFAX HALL

Originally called Endcliffe House and built in 1840, Halifax was subsequently extended into a hall after being purchased by Sir Joseph Jonas.

Jonas arrived in Britain in 1867 and became a British citizen in 1876, in which time earning a reputation as a noted industrialist and philanthropist. On top of his contributions to many other local charities and institutions, Jonas was also a valued benefactor to the newly formed University of Sheffield.

By achieving the post of Lord Mayor in 1904 as well as been rewarded with a knighthood, he had reached the pinnacle of local civic life. He was one of Sheffield's leading figures at the turn of the twentieth century. A portrait of Sir Joseph Jonas now hangs in the University's Mappin Hall.

The house was purchased from the trustees of the late Sir Joseph Jonas for the sum of £6000 in 1929 and in 1934 was opened as The University Hall for Women. In 1959 it was renamed Halifax Hall after Lord Halifax, then Chancellor of the University. Halifax Hall continued to be home for students at the University of Sheffield for the next 50 years.

THE MUSIC ROOM

The Music Room once housed a beautiful grand piano, where the tinkling of its keys could be heard throughout the building.

Today it is an intimate room with beautiful floor to ceiling windows and french doors leading outdoors to our terrace and gardens, making it perfect for a drinks reception in summer months.

The centrepiece of the room is the original open fire to keep you warm for winter receptions.
